Thus, in the first movement of the Quintet, Schnittke uses the combination of the two most common types of texture in music of the mid and late 20th century - ' micropolyphony ' in the string parts and ' polyphony of layers ' between the piano and string parts. Also, the first violin clearly conveys the introductory motive - this can be considered a separate ' melodic ' layer.

Greek pianist Erato Alakiozidou and the Lutoslawski Quartet perform works by Alfred Schnittke and Giya Kancheli, which combine the contemporary expressive vocabulary of postmodernism, with the historical narrative of the last three centuries of Western Music. Moments of amazing tension are juxtaposed with passages of fragile introspection.

In classical music, a piano quintet is a work of chamber music written for piano and four other instruments, most commonly a string quartet. The term also refers to the group of musicians that plays a piano quintet. The genre particularly flourished during the nineteenth century. Until the middle of the nineteenth century, most piano quintets were scored for piano, violin, viola, cello, and double bass. Following the success of Robert Schumann's Piano Quintet in E major, Op. 44 in 1842 ...

Alfred Garrievich Schnittke was a Soviet and German composer. Schnittke's early music shows the strong influence of Dmitri Shostakovich. He developed a polystylistic technique in works such as the epic Symphony No. 1 and his first concerto grosso. In the 1980s, Schnittke's music began to become more widely known abroad with the publication of his second and third string quartets and the String Trio; the ballet Peer Gynt; the third, fourth, and fifth symphonies; and the viola concerto and first c

Other works were more stylistically unified, such as his Piano Quintet (1972–1976), written in memory of his recently deceased mother. In the 1980s, Schnittke's music began to become more widely known abroad, thanks in part to the work of émigré Soviet artists such as the violinists Gidon Kremer and Mark Lubotsky.
